"I feel like I did," he said at the time. "I did a whole lot better than previous years. I still have to work on getting better in every aspect of my game."

Buxton said last Sunday that he appreciates the warm welcome he received in Cedar Rapids.

"It's been good," he said. "I've got a lot of fans. I'm just trying not to disappoint them, just go out and play my hardest."

The Kernels finished in second place during the first half of the Midwest League campaign to clinch a playoff spot. The Kernels have a 44-28 overall record this season. Mauer said there were times this season when he stood in the third-base coaching box and admired the way Buxton ran the bases, especially when he went from first to third.

"He's been our lynchpin," Mauer said previously. "He's handled himself very well. He brings a confidence about himself. He challenges his teammates, which is huge."

Minnesota Twins General Manager Terry Ryan watched Buxton play in Wisconsin over the weekend, the first time Ryan had seen Buxton play for the Kernels. Ryan told the Metro Sports Report before Sunday's game that he wanted to see if Buxton was ready for the next step.
